MY. MOTHER.

HOWATH J. L. WILLES Co. B. N. Y. and Infently, Postices Manior, Va.

Angel matter, there et dequity In thy long, last, qubet rest And no sight of mind, or we ping Efer will warm thy pulseless breast.

Yes, the grave enfolds another. With its cold damps, chilling o'es That dear form I love I, my mother I shall meet on earth, no more.

When the stendes of twilight gather Round habies hearth, our broken tannels. Then the counsels of our mother. Come, as from a spirit land.

Long himemory's chain unbooken Gilded with affection pure Will each laying word and token Help us life's ill to endure.

Yet to use my house is address. For the day-star, it hath ded And those cheerful units of gladues Now lie buried with the dead,

Gently as the evening zephyre Plant along the nurmaring main. Hath my angel mother left me Freed from every cutthly pain.

Be it mine one day to meet her.
When this lift is stern trials me o'er. Be transue in begon to great her . Thus to live forevermore.

THE UNION.

DY JELLERA E. BRACKELI fiscad at the 14th Anniversity of the "Republic in h stitution," in Ruston, March 4, 1863; } The Union is my flume-to-night. The Union of the States. When stars, he precless beauty bright Regardful of their mates. Each, in its orbit, moved and shone.

As in the days of Washington.

> Throughtless of fear before the foe. Where rang the cannon's peal, Their only dread, their contary's woe. Their highest hope its weal. Where'er our lesses were drawn in lin There waved the Palmstree with the Pine Alike beloved, and loving then. By eliken fetters bound Not with the sword, but with the pen-Leaders their equats found, And orators their shafts could wing Like Hayne and Webster, vold of sting.

And must it, shall it end? ob say. Sons of the patrice sires! Within the hearts of men, to buy-Are there no glowing three? To weld more the broken band And nake this a united! and,

By all we in the past have been-By all that we may hope Where in the future lies unseen Our union's horoscope. No effort spare, no zentubate, Lest come those words, "too late, too late,"

We say with faces in the dust. Bear los: Thy pitying car Who art alone a people's trust, Oh, Printe of Peace, draw mear, Thy spirit, and usught classeside, Can part, for us, the whelming tide.

MARRYING FOR MONEY.

Gold is a very poor substitute for affection We doubt that any main or woman, with a theart capable of entertaining a sincere love for another human being, ever 'unarried for money' without purchasing life-long unhappiness. There are people in the world who are not much troubled with an affectionate nature. Their love (or rather what answers them as a substitute for love) is a sort of good-natured regard, created sometimes by a gratified vanity and sometimes by spotaneous gratitude for services rendered. With such a person, the arrival of wealth, by a marriage, might awaken a feeling of thankfulness that would resemble a love for the one who brought that wealth It might also touch the complacency of the enriched one so much, by investing it with the means of estentation, as to kindle a gratitude that would pass for lave. But these are re-semblances of lave, not love itself. For love itself is wholly disinterested. It is a passion which, in its purity, exalts the human heart entirely above all suidid consideration—relies it, fills it with a chivalric devotion, and inspires the whole being it influences with a something so akin to divinity, that all bases conceptions drop from its association, and crawl away from it, as reptiles crawl from excess of light. Such

It is only with the contented in ture that love can being all its joys to the cotportier: but, with each a rature, love always of Greenies, Full, we, with the others for sile at lower asserts its glorious origin, and is itself alone independent of exterior commissances. Thus a Effect quality Sygne Carel Hums. med love is ever love, whatever lot it may be field to fillie. Money cannot buy it, nor the want of money drive it away. The counterfeit love which money purchases may resemble it, but the precious metal, after all, is the only one that will stand the test of trial and of time.

DON'T EXPECT TOO MUCH.

The woman who refuses to marry when suitable opportunity offers, because the gentle-man is not perfection, will be very apt to die an old maid. The man who does not wed because he cannot find an suged in a hoop-shirt, will be certain to go to the grave an old bachdor.— You will never have a friend, says the ancient proverb, if you must have one without a failing. The lest of men have their faults ; and so have the lest of woman. Indeed, to be very candid, as there is no diamond without some flow, we should begin strongly to suspect the lumour quality of any man or woman who seemed to b wholly destitute of intimuities. Don't expect too nucle, therefore. Consider yourself a pretty Sature was in charactery spirits, and had her shand in and ask of mbody to be touch better than you are. You will discover that to be Carb. Sola. both a safe and a certain rule in estimating the t value of others.

Hon't expect too much, or else you will be certain to get too little. One extreme inevitably begets another. Men differ materially, and some appear to be sent into the social world especially to put to a slow death, by torture, the especially to jut to relow death, by 150 ture, the figuritie, condicting, sufficing creatures who call them lumbands. Women differ quite as greatly; and not a few, like Xamppe, are admirably constituted to teach patients—and pathosophy to the domestic marry is who rups the horizon of the domestic marry is who rups the horizon. paying their bills and decominating them "dar-But the majority of user and women lings. But the majority of men and women do not belong to this extreme class, nor yet to the smaller class of extremets, who seem to live like turde-doves, with no domination of love to occasion doubt, and no species of case to in-traduce matrimonial disquientde. The great mass, on the contrary, belong to that just indicat in which why is spats" are not infrequent, and moments of positive welded happiness are by no means rare; in which mutual "title" occur, just as summer-clouds due the sunlight, only to render the subsequent eduic is entail doubly delight-This is the general experience of wedded Expect no more, and you will seldom yless. Never expect too much, we repeat and you will never be severely disappointed.

(Tan s). Information is received to-day from Fortress Moncoe that the rebel government is moving from Richmond all its military supplies. and is keeping up unly a show of strength in front of our army at Fredericksburg. Gen. Dix believes they are preparing to leave Richannel, and has so informed the authorities here. Gen. Hooker aftern of to-day that with the exreption of the withdrawal of Languages's Division the whole army is now encamped in the rear of Frederick-burg in full force. A rebel officer who took the oath of allegiance to day, lated positively that the rebel leaders have deto mind to attainin Virginia as soon as they can do so safely. This he predicted would cause matriay in the Virginia Regiments in the field. The rebel army at Fredericheburg, he says, is composed mainly of Virginium.
